Greetings!

Your negotiating team has now met with the University's team on five dates.

We have both exchanged initial non-monetary and monetary proposals.

At this point the parties have reached agreement on a number of non-contentious issues.

What happens next...

Our next joint bargaining date is set for May 19, 2009.

Until then your negotiating team will be hard at work fine tuning our proposals and carefully scrutinizing the University's proposals.

It is important to note that to be effective, the specific points of the collective agreement that are being bargained on any given day are kept confidential until we have negotiated a final and full agreement.

If you have any questions or comments please send an email to bargaining@cawlocal555.ca.

This email address is monitored directly by the negotiating team.

The University's negotiating team is led by John Capone, Dean of the Faculty of Science, and Mark Haley, Assistant Vice President, Human Resources Services. Also on the University's bargaining team are:
